VOL. XIV. No. 11.

EDMONTON, ALBERTA, MONDAY, JUNE 6TH, 1892.

SEMI-WEEKLY, 8 PAGES.

LOCAL.

MRS. and Miss Ross, of Saddle lake, left for home on Saturday.

THE Presbytery of Calgary met on May 31st in Calgary, Rev. D. G. McQueen, of Edmonton, moderator.

MRS. THOS. HOURSTON left for Winnipeg on Friday's train, to visit her mother who is dangerously ill.

H. WILSON has rented Rivet's building, South Edmonton, and will start a dry goods and hardware store there.

EIGHTEEN immigrants arrived on Thursday's train direct from Germany. They joined the colony on Stony Plain.

THE new schoolhouse for East Edmonton school district has been completed by the contractor, K. A. McLeod.

THE new ferry scow and wire cable for Victoria left for that place to-day in charge of W. Buchanan and Peter Erasmus.

J. DARLEY HARRISON, M.D., of Fredericton, N. B., arrived on Thursday's train to commence the practice of his profession here.

THURSDAY'S rain caused a good rise in the river. All the bars were covered on Friday, and some drift wood was coming down.

R. JARVIS has been awarded the contract of supplying the stone for the new flouring mill near the station. About eighteen cords of stone will be required.

J. RITCHIE, of the Edmonton Milling Company, is preparing to erect a residence on the South Side town site, at the corner of Main street and Saskatchewan Avenue.

ARCHBISHOP TACHE left on Friday's train for Calgary, where he will remain until the return of the rest of the episcopal party from the coast, when he will accompany them to Winnipeg.

THE country has put on its summer dress and is very fair to look upon. At and near Edmonton the scenery along the Saskatchewan will compare favorably with the finest river scenery in the world.

REV. MR. HOLMES, C. M. S., missionary at Lesser Slave lake, arrived from the east on Thursday's train, accompanied by his bride, on the way to their mission station. They are the guests of Jas. McDonald.

THE heavy rain of Wednesday night and Thursday cleared off on Thursday night, and Friday was bright, breezy and warm. Although a few flakes of snow fell on Thursday forenoon no frost followed, so that the greatest possible amount of good has been done.

A RAFT of lumber belonging to Moore & Macdowall, which was snubbed at Ross' landing, was carried away by the rise in the river on Thursday night. There is said to have been 60,000 feet of lumber in it. It was caught by W. Borwick of the lower settlement and successfully snubbed at Holland's point about four miles from town.

THE May number of Canada fully sustains the high reputation which this popular monthly has so well earned. As the most thoroughly Canadian of all our literary journals, it should find a welcome in every home. The poems are by J. F. Herbin, "Erie," and Thos. C. Robson. LeMoine's very interesting paper on "The History and Legends of the King's Forges," is itself worth the price of the number.

CAPT. DAWSON, acting under instructions of the Edmonton town council, has taken a preliminary view of the Mill Creek valley, the object being the construction of a spur track to the flat opposite town. He finds that he can get a practicable line from the C. & E. line at the Little Mill Creek to the east end of the flat with a drop of not more than four feet to the 100, and without any serious engineering difficulties.

FRANK KERNOHAN returned from a long visit to Montana on Thursday's train.

REV. MR. HOLMES of Lesser Slave lake, preached in All Saints' church on Sunday.

R. LOGAN arrived from Beaver lake on Sunday. Crops never looked better at the lake. Growth is good.

A. D. OSBORNE, postmaster, is still very ill from inflammation of the lungs. The postoffice is being managed by F. A. Osborne.

THE wheat sown by H. Vizina, at the Horse Hill, in March last, is looking well, and is further advanced than any later sown grain.

REV. Messrs. German, Adamson and Steinhauer left on Friday for their missions at Saddle lake, Victoria and Whitefish lake respectively.

MISS LOGAN, daughter of R. Logan, of Beaver lake, and Miss Norris, daughter of J. Norris, Edmonton, arrived from Calgary on Thursday's train.

E. RICHARDSON, late principal of the Edmonton public school, is now head master in the model school of Madoc, Ont., where five teachers are employed.

ISAAC DAIGNAULT, who has lived on the flat opposite town for many years past, died on Thursday last, at St. Joachim's mission, and was buried at St. Albert. He was of very great age, and leaves a large family of grown up sons.

A HIGH tower has been erected by the meteorological service near the residence of the observer, A. Taylor, upon which the wind gauge will be placed. The velocity and direction of the wind will be registered by sound and electricity.

ST. ALBERT mission has a large field of Red Fife wheat sown last September, which is looking well, and is considerably further advanced than the best spring sown crop. An experiment of the same nature tried last year, gave most satisfactory results.

THE police at Lake St. Ann have notified the half breed settlers there that they must not catch white fish without first procuring a license. As dollars are not numerous in that locality, fishing has stopped and as duckshooting is prohibited by the Northwest game law, there are some very hungry people at Lake St. Ann.

THE Caroline Gage Company played "Mr. Barnes of New York" on Thursday evening to a fair house although the rain was heavy and the roads awful. There was a small house Friday night when "Damon and Pythias" was put on, but on Saturday every possible space was occupied to see "Our Boys," an extremely funny piece. The play to-night is "Oliver Twist," and on Tuesday night—the last of the Company's appearance here—"Our American Cousin." The plays presented by this Company have all been good and have been well put on. The enterprise of the Company is well supported by the ability of its manager and members.

THE Winnipeg Free Press, of May 30th, mentions the recent death, at Fairhaven, Washington Territory, of Miss Christine F. McLeod, teacher in the New Whatcom, Washington, public school, at one time a teacher in the public school of Winnipeg. Deceased was a sister of K. A. McLeod, contractor and builder, Edmonton. Death resulted from an attack of la grippe. The New Whatcom paper, in speaking of the death and funeral of Miss McLeod, says: No death has ever occasioned more poignant grief among a large circle of friends in this community. The flags of all the school buildings of New Whatcom were placed at half mast yesterday out of respect to the memory of the deceased. The floral tributes contributed by the teachers and pupils of the Whatcom and Fairhaven schools and by other friends and organizations were the most profuse and elaborate ever seen here.

Fifty-nine deaths in Winnipeg during May.

Chas. Mair, who was announced as having left Prince Albert to become a citizen of St. Paul, has returned to Prince Albert.

THE H. B. Company's new steamer Caledonia has ascended the Skeena river, British Columbia, to Hazelton with a full load of freight. The Skeena was the scene of a slight Indian trouble a year or two ago.

ARMSTRONG'S motion to empower the Northwest assembly to deal with educational and language questions, after the next general election, was discussed in the house on May 31st. Clark Wallace, conservative, moved, in amendment, that power be only given to deal with education. McCarthy moved a further amendment that all restrictions on the assembly's dealing with educational and language questions be repealed. The debate was not concluded at last accounts.

THE Belfast Telegraph publishes an editorial, five columns in length detailing the plans of the Ulster loyalists for passive resistance to the Dublin parliament, in the event of Home rule being granted to Ireland. The loyalists will ignore the enactments of parliament and refuse to pay any taxes which it may attempt to levy. They will not take part in any election of members of a Dublin parliament, and will recognize the laws as they will exist at the time of the enactment of a Home Rule bill. The loyalists will be bound closely together by pledges for mutual support and will defend their rights, if necessary, against public aggression.

IMMIGRATION.

In the wild efforts that have been made, from time to time—on paper at least—to settle up the Northwest from Europe without drawing on the population of the Eastern provinces, there has been a vast deal of misdirected energy; or rather a large proportion of the total amount of energy used has been misdirected. The effort has been to draw men of capital without practical knowledge and men who had neither capital nor experience, simply laborers. At any rate, of these classes the bulk of the immigration that has been secured from the British Islands has been made up. To neither class does the Northwest, in its present condition, offer a fair field. It is a peculiarity of this country, and of the Northwest, more than any other part of Canada, that a man must be able to work at, to manage, to personally oversee, to thoroughly understand, his own business, or he will not succeed at it. This is not because the country lacks in natural wealth, it is because natural wealth is so abundant that any man who is competent to manage another man's business for him, soon finds an opportunity to open a business of his own, and therefore the skilled and trustworthy services of men such as manage every line of business in Great Britain, including agriculture, at fixed and reasonable salaries, cannot be secured in Canada for money. On the other hand, speaking of the Northwest in particular—the opportunity which is afforded to every man who desires to own a farm of his own, makes those who would be laborers in other countries farmers for themselves in this, but does not, at once, give them the capital which would enable them to employ hired labor. In this way, although no land on earth is so full of natural wealth so easily turned to account as the Northwest British capital and British labor have both alike found it less desirable than other parts of the world.

The question naturally arises: If neither British capital nor labor is successful in the Northwest, what British immigration is possible that would be successful? The answer is: An immigration of capital and labor combined in the individual. That is to say, not men who had capital and were willing to labor, but men who, being actual workers, have a small capital, the result of their own or their father's savings from actual work. This is the class of people who settled Ontario and made that province what it is. Farm foremen, thrifty farm laborers, who had a little money saved up, artisans whom the rising factories crowded out of their old occupations from England and Scotland, and the renters of small holdings in Ireland. Every man, although utterly strange to the work and life he had to meet in Canada, thoroughly versed in the knowledge that bread is made of sweat, and that a shilling is not one-and-six. There are the men to whom the Northwest offers a fair field, a better field than is offered by any other land, and practically none such have come. Possibly with the improvement of times in the Old Country in the past twenty-five years, thrifty and ambitious laborers and artisans do not find it necessary to emigrate. Or perhaps such game is considered too low by our intelligent immigration service, as it neither brings the wealth of the capitalist or the numbers of the laborer, and therefore would not cut such a fancy figure in the romances issued, from time to time, over the signature of Mr. John Lowe.

To British capital or British labor the Eastern provinces of Canada offer a much more inviting field at the present time than the Northwest. There the capitalist might expect to secure experienced and trustworthy managers in lines of business, the profits on which could be computed with fair accuracy from year to year ahead. And the investment of his capital there would release an equal amount of native capital that, brought to the Northwest, and used with careful oversight, skill and judgment, would give better returns than could be hoped for elsewhere, but that without these would be simply thrown away.

Settlement is increasing along the North Thompson river, British Columbia, to such an extent that the old pack trail has been replaced for a part of the distance by a wagon road, and now the wagon road has become inadequate. The Kamloops Sentinel wants the river improved to permit of steamboat navigation. In proof of the fertility of the soil the Sentinel mentions a stalk of rye sown last September which, on May 28th, measured 5 feet 6 inches. From May 11th to 15th it grew 7½ inches and from May 15th to 24th it grew 32½ inches. Oats, rye and wheat are the favorite crops. Orchards have been planted for many years by the farmers of the North Thompson and are continually being added to; fruit being a sure crop. A fruit cannery at Kamloops could be supplied by the fruit raised on the North Thompson. The North Thompson was on the Mackenzie route of the C. P. R., and occupied that part of it which parallels the present line through the Selkirk range, with its heavy grades and snow slides. The Mackenzie line would have been more easily built, more easily operated, and would have developed local traffic as the present line does not.

WILD FRUITS.

There is every promise of the present being a season of abundance of wild fruits. No part of the world has a greater abundance of such fruits than the Edmonton district.

The Saskatoon, is perhaps THE berry of the Saskatchewan. The bush is found everywhere throughout this district, in open ground or in woods, wherever the land is dry and mellow. It varies in height from three to twenty feet, attaining the latter height only when growing amongst large timber. For the past two weeks, while the leaves of other trees and bushes have been coming out slowly, the Saskatoon has covered almost every hillside and filled every clump of woods with its white flowers and made the air delicious with their sweet scent. The wood of the bush or tree is elastic, hard and the bark thin, somewhat resembling the blue beech of Ontario. In this country where large trees of hardwood are unknown it supplied the Indians with the material for their bows. The berry somewhat resembles the universally known blue berry in color, size and taste, but is larger, firmer and with a stronger and finer flavor. For eating fresh, drying for winter use, or making wine of, they can not be excelled, but, strange to say, they do not stand cooking well, and are therefore thought lightly of by many housewives. When cooked they lose their peculiar flavor, the skins thicken and become leathery and tasteless. They ripen in early August, and in years of abundance can be gathered anywhere and everywhere, in pitfalls, bagfuls, barrels and wagon loads. Only occasionally, however, are they so abundant. The blossoms come out so early in the season that they are apt to be pinched by frost. As they all blossom at once, and as a very slight frost will kill the blossoms, they either give a full crop or no crop at all. This year the backwardness of the spring prevented them from coming out too early, the berries are now partly formed, and unless something unheard of should occur, there will be such an abundance this year as has not been since 1886. The Saskatoon grows well under cultivation and can be made a beautiful little ornamental tree.

Other early blossoming berries are the black currant and gooseberry. Both grow abundantly here. Of the currant there are two varieties, one growing on dry land in woods and the other growing only in swamps. The former is practically the cultivated black currant of the East, the only difference being that the berries are if anything larger and their flavor finer. The swamp variety grows on little bushes not more than a foot high. The berry is not so large as the high bush variety and it has a strange, almost bitter taste. Both varieties produce every year as a rule, but are only found in localities suited to their growth. The low bush variety is most abundant, but least valuable. The high bush improves with transplanting and cultivation and thrives luxuriantly without particular care. There are many varieties of goose berries, and the bushes of one or another of the varieties are found almost everywhere, but they do not bear abundantly as a rule. One of the varieties, a small bush without prickles, which has been tried in cultivation has given an abundant yield of large, smooth, oval, finely flavored berries. But this is the only one that has given satisfaction. The common prickly gooseberry bush, bearing prickly berries, which is most frequently met with, does not fruit well either growing wild or in cultivation.

DAKOTA CROPS.

The bulletin of the North Dakota state weather service for the week ended May 21 says: The week just ended opened fair and warmer, and gave opportunity for a thorough pushing of the greatly delayed seeding, which was well taken advantage of in all sections of the state. Seeding is about completed in several counties, except in low lands. On Tuesday a very heavy rain storm occurred in the eastern portion, again putting a stop to all work. This rain storm was followed during the rest of the week by abnormally low temperature, high northerly winds and sleet and snow. In the central and western counties only a few light showers occurred, which tended to improve rather than injure crop conditions, although the high winds and low temperature of the last four days have been detrimental. In Burleigh county wheat seed put in with broadcast seeders was blown out. Nearly all correspondents report wheat coming up in fine condition, though somewhat slow. Many cattle in herds are dying for want of warm weather and grass to feed on at Montpelier. Stutsman county. Slight injury was done to growing crops by frost of the 18th, 19th and 20th at Steele, Kidder county.

A LESSON IN NAVIGATION.

ALTHOUGH life is dull at Edmonton now in comparison with the old days of wild adventure and deadly peril, yet there are times when enough of excitement and danger is met with to gratify the most ardent temperament. So thought two of our citizens one evening not long ago. They had, as is now somewhat fashionable amongst the bloods of town, taken a late and inspiring dinner at the Hotel Edmonton. Time had no interest for them until after the dinner was over and in the usual course of events it was necessary for them to return home. They arrived at the Fort ferry without mishap to find the river flowing smooth and calm in the moonlight, the large ferry scow, tied carefully to the bank, and the ferryman in bed. It would have been quite in order to have aroused the ferryman and have crossed the river in the usual way; but that was too commonplace an idea for the elated minds of the travelers. They would have a joke on the ferryman, and save announcing themselves as being out so late. So they cast off the rope, shoved the scow out in the stream and started merrily across. Looked at from the bank the Saskatchewan is a smooth, gently flowing, not overly wide river. So thought our heroes when they left the shore, but they changed their minds shortly. There are mysteries connected with the navigation of even a ferry scow that they, with all their worldly wisdom, were ignorant of. The initiated know that the leeboard must be let down at the stern and the bow of the scow turned partly up stream in order that the current may force her across. Our friends did not let down the leeboard and did not turn the bow up stream. The consequence was that when they got well out, and the full force of the current struck her broadside, she stuck fast and could not go either forward or back. Then the river seemed to be miles wide, the current at least forty miles an hour and growing swifter every minute, and some terrible unseen power seemed to be struggling to pull the scow and her frightened passengers under, and, indeed, had she not been large, sound and well built, under she would have gone. The strain on both ropes and passengers was terrible; but it could not last, something had to give. The ropes holding the scow to the cable broke and she started down stream, bound for Fort Saskatchewan, Battleford, Grand rapids and all points east. Luckily, after turning the bend below the Fort, she ran into the bank—the same she had started from—and was safely snubbed by her noble crew, who then, wiser and sadder—very much sadder—than when she started, wended their way along the wet, and slippery and muddy clay bank for a long and weary mile, aroused the ferryman and were rowed across to the north side in a small boat and a humble frame of mind. The pledge of secrecy which they extracted from the ferryman is the reason for their names not appearing in this veracious tale.

The Montreal correspondent of the Empire writes as follows with regard to the object of the Roman Catholic episcopal excursion to the Territories: "The episcopacy of French Canada have done a great many noble and patriotic acts since the change from French to English rule in this country, but none, perhaps, more worthy than their present efforts to turn the tide of immigration from the United States to the Canadian Northwest. In order to speak rightly of our western heritage the Rev. Father Lacombe, the well-known missionary from the Northwest, felt that his confreres of the province of Quebec should go out and see that magnificent domain and judge for themselves. With this end in view a grand episcopal excursion has been organized to leave on Monday evening."

Calgary Herald: "We understand that the new townsite in the vicinity of Macleod, namely, at the junction of the Crow's Nest Pass line with the C. & E. on Old Man's river, will be definitely located in the course of a few days. The townsite is on the farm of Joe Monte, which lies on both sides of the river, the town itself to be on the north side and about two miles west of the present town of Macleod."

PRESENTATION.

A meeting was held in the N. W. M. Police recreation room, on the evening of the 16th, for the purpose of presenting an address and purse to Staff-Sergeant Joyce (veterinary department) given by the non-commissioned officers and constables of "C" Division, on the eve of his departure to "B" Division, Wood Mountain. Sergeant Todd read the address and presented the purse. Sergeant Joyce replied in a few words, thanking all present for the unexpected pleasure conferred on him, at the same time he felt sorry to leave Fort Saskatchewan, leaving so many kind friends behind him. After singing "For he's a Jolly Good Fellow," and giving him three cheers, the meeting separated. Fort Saskatchewan loses a good, upright, unassuming non-commissioned officer in the person of Sergeant Joyce, and his obliging disposition and able services were greatly appreciated by many, yet the old saying is ever true which says: "The best of friends must part."
